Introduction to Telephony
Extra Credit Assignment

I support the No Call List to the fullest extent. The number of unwanted phone calls that I receive each week astonishes me. Many times telemarketers, of which I have no time for, interrupt me. I have received these annoying phone calls throughout the day. Some have called as early as 8am while others as late as 9pm. I have asked these callers repeatedly to take my number off their calling list, but they have not. I think that with the No Call List, there will be less time wasted because telemarketers will not be able to call and be a burden to us.

Often times when the phone rings and “unavailable” appears on the called identification, I do not even answer it. If I do, I am greeted with a long pause before someone is even there to speak to me. There was even this case when one telemarketer called twice within four hours. Both times he greeted me with the same response after his computer had finally connected his line to mine. He said, “Sorry, I was jumbling with the phone.” I am no fool, and I do not want to deal with telemarketers any longer.

In conclusion, I support the No Call List. I want the unwanted phone calls to end and I don’t want to screen my phone calls for telemarketers any longer.

Thank you for your time.
